YEARN

COME FROM?

WHERE IS YEARN

GOING?

*“We are like a baby bird just hatched.
No one designed Yearn. It emerged from Andre's gift of all the YFI.
It's sink or swim for us. The cells of Yearn either learn how to pulse together and move feathers and wings, or we die in the nest.”*

PROLOGUE

IN THE LAND OF BLUE PILLS
EVERYTHING YOU THOUGHT WAS IMPORTANT

CEASES TO MATTER

YOUR TITLE
YOUR NET WORTH
YOUR NATIONALITY
YOUR DEGREES YOUR LOOKS
EVEN YOUR NAME

All that matters is your contribution

This book is an invitation to contribute

IT IS THE HAND BECKONING

FROM THE GAP YOU'VE NEVER NOTICED IN THE HEDGES

Will you take the well-worn paths of yesterday? It asks

Or do you wish to go somewhere new?

The Yearn Blue Pill has one overriding goal:
to communicate Yearn's vision

But how do you do that from within a network with no leader?

HOW DO YOU UNITE THE VIEWS OF HUNDREDS OF DIVERSE CONTRIBUTORS
FROM AROUND

A blue-toned illustration of a fantastical landscape. In the upper left, a figure in a long, flowing robe stands on a high, rocky cliff. A path leads from the bottom center towards the cliff. The foreground is filled with intricate, detailed patterns resembling flowers, leaves, and abstract shapes. The background is a dark, textured blue. Overlaid on the center of the image is white text.

THE SHORT ANSWER IS,
YOU CAN'T

We're all here for different reasons

We all have different goals

But through candid discussions with the community, we've found common ground

This document is the result of those conversations

We recognize these pages as dangerous

Naming our vision could limit us

And we are limitless

But today, one year after the birth of YFI

We've recognized the time has come

We're putting our vision on paper

So that when forks arise in the road, there is a place contributors can go

To get an answer to the question:

Is this Yearn?

Or is it not?

PART ONE:

PAST

Every contributor to Yearn has a story, arc, or journey

And we must begin with the story of the first

Andre Cronje

In 2018, he studied every major crypto project's code
He read their Githubs line-by-line
He published reviews for all to read ports the amount of assets the calling Strategy has free (usually in terms of ROI).

the performance fee is determined here, off of the strategy's profits (if any), and sent to governance.

the strategist's fee is also determined here (off of profits), to be handled according to the strategist on the next harvest.

this may only be called by a Strategy managed by this Vault.

for approved strategies, this is the most efficient behavior. The Strategy reports back what it has free, then Vault "decides" whether to take some back or give it more. Note that the most it can take is `gain + _debtPayment``, and the most it can give is all of the remaining reserves. Anything outside of those bounds is abnormal behavior.

All approved strategies must have increased diligence around calling this function, as abnormal behavior could become catastrophic.

in gain
Amount Strategy has realized as a gain on it's investment since its last report, and is free to be given back to Vault as earnings in loss

Amount Strategy has realized as a loss on it's investment since its last report, and should be accounted for on the Vault's balance sheet the loss will reduce the `debtRatio`. The next time the strategy will pay back the debt in an attempt to adjust to the new in `_debtPayment`

Amount Strategy has made available to cover

Amount of debt outstanding approved at self lying

And in that process, he found the truth: that most projects were built on lies and hype

They were forks with fancy names or forks of forks that didn't do what they promised

But some of them were altogether different

Some of them inspired him to build

In 2019, Andre put on his coveralls and became a yield farmer

But he was not your typical yield farmer (doing things by hand)

He tended his crops with code

He built and automated all of his processes directly on Ethereum

And by doing so, he built the world's first yield aggregator

It was a perpetual yield machine

Hello, world!

On Feb. 4, 2020, Andre announced the birth of iearn.finance (which would become Yearn)

“Don’t do it the way I did it, which was hard, cost me a lot of money, and has created very little network effect,” he wrote

But, the world has a way of finding things of value

It saw iEarn, and saw that it was good

And capital came flooding in

“I TEST IN PROD,” ANDRE PROCLAIMED

BE WARNED

iEARN WAS NOT AUDITED

IT WAS “DANGEROUS”

AND IT WAS REVOLUTIONARY

The revolutionaries noticed

One by one, they came... new contributors with fantastical names

XI

XVI

THE GHOST

THE DUDE

III

THE BIRD

THE GLASS OF MILK

They weren't merely interested in finance; they were interested in the FUTURE

They saw what this experimental project could become:
a gargantuan, unstoppable, extra-governmental,
decentralized, permissionless, self-healing, collective organism with a heart pumping yield to the rhythm of each new block

A ubiquitous yield-layer to underpin every financial instrument on the planet – no banks or middlemen with golden cufflinks required

They wanted to contribute and they asked to get involved

They helped iEarn morph into Yearn

They suffered attacks, hacks, and scathing criticisms

But they worked together...

United across the globe by an unspoken sense of purpose

“It has been amazingly fun to face all these challenges, and each one I believe has created a more robust ecosystem,” Andre wrote on February 4, 2020.

“Looking forward to many more problems to come”

At Yearn, contributors don't shy away from the hard things, they seek them out

Remember: they hide opportunities

There's a philosophy in Andre's message:
Look forward to problems

PROBLEMS ARE THE CLAY WE USE TO MOLD THE FUTURE

On July 17, 2020, Andre announced he was giving away control

Anyone providing liquidity on Yearn could earn YFI, a brand new governance token (pronounced “wifey”) that granted holders power over the platform’s future

“The control is in your hands,” Andre said

“Good luck”

“The roots of Yearn are in the gift,” one contributor said

“Andre’s fair launch was a revolutionary act that put generosity in the DNA of the whole community,” another said

Yearn doesn’t ask what it can extract

It asks what it can give away

Not three months later it was clear the experiment had become something much larger than any one contributor

It was a movement

“I am not Yearn,” Andre wrote

“Consider how big the ecosystem has become, consider all the websites, tooling, newsletters, forum, Discord, Telegram, and active development on Github. None of these are done by myself. I am a rapid prototyper and I will continue to be one.”

“The Yearn team is far more skilled and capable than I am, and anyone that thinks Yearn is dictated, led, or in any way dependent on me, is doing Yearn a disservice. I am happy to be a contributor to something much bigger.”

“I don’t foresee builders stopping, and I will continue to build. Some of it will be useful, some of it will end up failures. But I think there is more value in trying, even if it is a failure, than all the critics deeming it so.”

There are few things in the world more powerful than the gift

Andre Cronje gave away all the YFI

Every Single One

Over a billion dollars in value

The inflaton field from this cosmic gift has left an indelible mark on the collective

Its vibrations echo in every one of us

It called us here

Not for money

Not for fame

But because that's what gifts do

They are magic

Andre cast a spell into this world woven with integrity, genius, and generosity

And Yearn was what he summoned

PART TWO:

PRESENT

Question: What is Yearn?

An innovation factory?

A yield-aggregator protocol?

An intersubjective life-form?

Something else, entirely?

Question: Who can contribute to Yearn?

Answer: You

Whoever you are, wherever you are, you may know what Yearn is better than we do

Come show us

Yearn is an emergent and evolving experiment in decentralized collaboration

It has no papers of incorporation, no headquarters, nor even a list of names and locations for its contributors

An aerial photograph of a city street grid, overlaid with a semi-transparent blue filter. The text is centered and reads:

Yearn is open Everything it builds is visible

Yearn is post-corporate... a place where you never have to sell yourself because your contributions speak for you

AT YEARN, YOUR WORK IS NOT ASSIGNED

IT IS GUIDED BY YOUR INNER VOICE

Question: What if the most radical component of Yearn isn't the yield machine? The machine, after all, is a technical apparatus constructed of code

It cannot exist without its network of hearts and minds

Perhaps the network itself is the most radical part of Yearn

DECENTRALIZED AUTONOMOUS

ORGANIZATION

Our unique DAO and those who embody it

In October 2020, Yearn contributors laid out a manifesto

First, it named what Yearn is not:

YEARN IS NOT A COMPANY

HAVE INVESTORS

CATER TO SPECULATORS

HAVE AN OFFICIAL VOICE

OWED ANYTHING FROM ANYONE

Then, it named what Yearn is:

YEARN IS A COLLECTIVE OF CONTRIBUTORS

YEARN IS EQUAL OPPORTUNITY

YEARN IS FOR BUILDERS

YEARN IS FOR SELF-STARTERS

COLLABORATORS

YEARN IS INFLUENCED BY MERIT

YEARN IS GOVERNED BY YFI, BUT YFI DOES NOT GOVERN YEARN'S CONTRIBUTORS

YEARN IS

CONSTANTLY EVOLVING

AND FINALLY: “WHAT YEARN IS TODAY,
MAY NOT BE WHAT IT IS TOMORROW – WHAT YOU DO AFTER READING THIS MAY CHANGE YEARN FOREVER.
IT’S UP TO YOU.”

Yearn has contributors who haven't written a line of code and others who have spent decades developing software

Both groups ask,
*“Am I good enough to be here?”

The answer is simple

YES

It's not about what's come before,
it's about now

We are here now

If you have fallen down Yearn's gravity well, there is a reason

Let's bump against the impossible and see if it moves

No one knows the future
(That's because it doesn't exist)

PART THREE:

FUTURE

HERE WE ARE THE SELF-SOVEREIGN BEINGS OF YEARN

We are leaders and seekers who work in the gift to invent the future

We came from chaos and have chosen not to project the rigid, closed, heirarchical control structures imprinted in our collective memory into this pure formless space in front of us

We chose the harder path

The path of creation

And we are not the first

Decades before Satoshi, pioneering spirits had already begun exploring the future of coordination

The writer Frederic Laloux calls these rare endeavours Teal organizations

They have been around for decades, hidden in plain sight, doing things you'd think were impossible: functioning with radical transparency; working without managers, bureaucracy, or even budgets

THESE TEAMS WORK AT THE SPEED OF TRUST – THE FASTEST WE CAN EVER GO

EVERYONE IS A LEADER, DECIDING FOR THEMSELVES
HOW TO FOLLOW THE GROUP'S EVOLUTIONARY PURPOSE

This is how we work at Yearn

We are not a machine

We are life itself

We are not Red, Amber, Orange, or Green...

We are Teal

And we are Blue

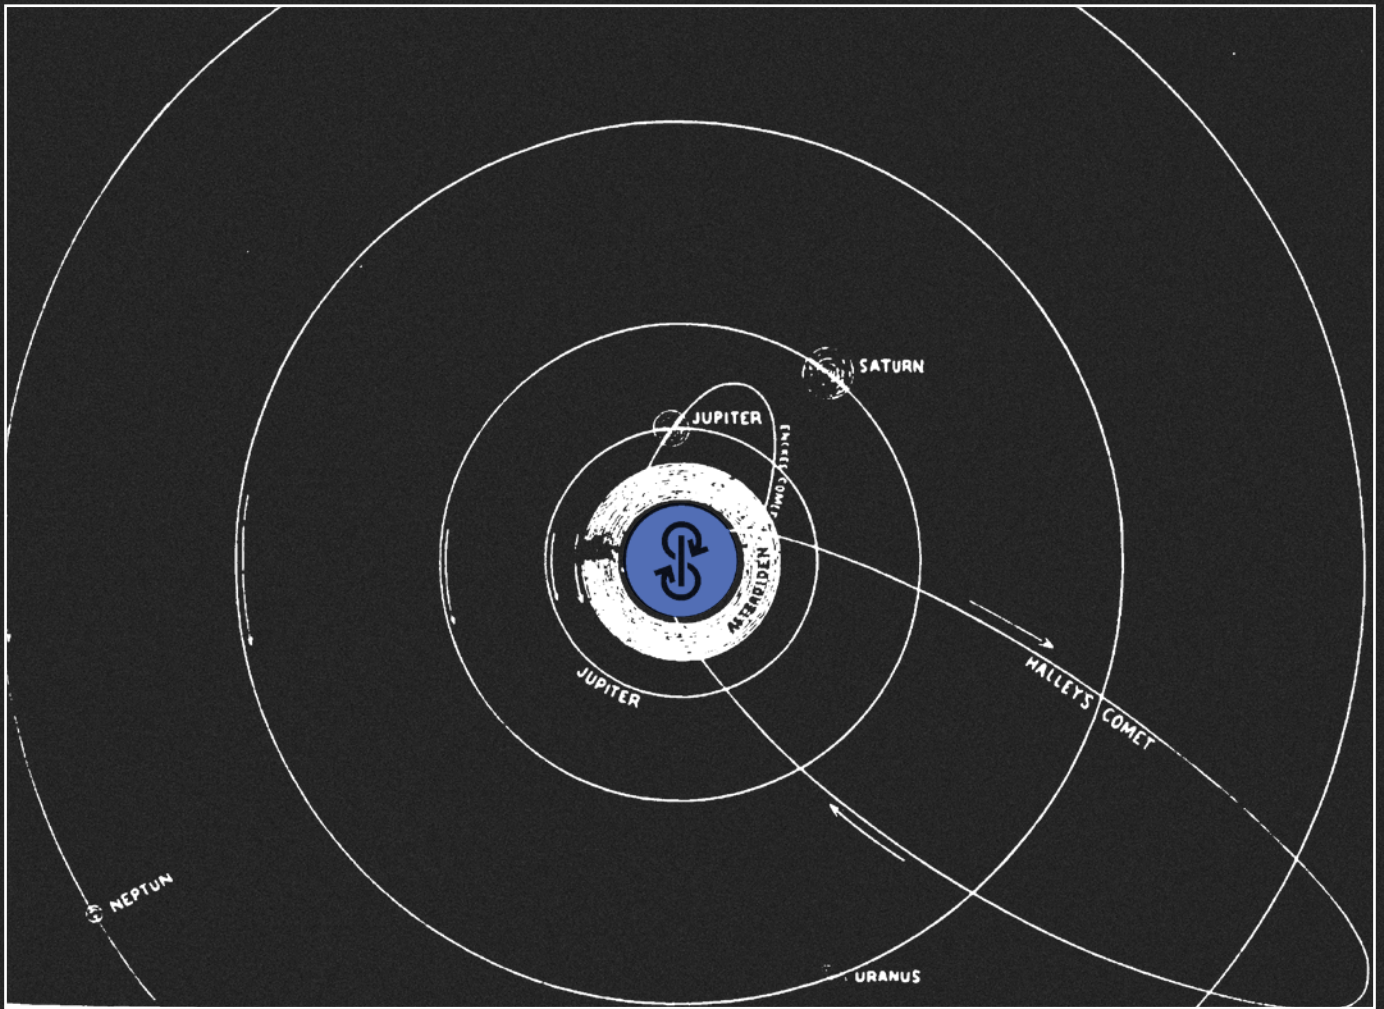

We will chart our own course

The future of work is like a party bike that we ride together, each peddling as much or as little as we want, and when someone knows where to go next, they get to steer

And there is no map for where we are going

To get there, we must cross the river by feeling for stones

Our eyes won't help us, nor will our minds

A heart cell doesn't know how to climb a mountain, but when it pumps blood and trusts its friends, well then it might just find the summit

Now what if I told you that each of us is made up of whole beings, is a whole being, and is a part of larger whole beings?

And then what if I said that those larger whole beings have their own uncharted territory ahead?

Well, for those of us who have already embarked on this journey together, we feel this future in our bones, singing to us

Our vision isn't a roadmap with a set of goals and deliverables

It is this song

Yearn's voice

THE SOUNDLESS VOICE OF OUR COLLECTIVE,
CALLING TO US FROM BETWEEN THE PAGES

We are in the realm of networks now

DECENTRALIZED FINANCE

In DeFi, and at Yearn, this is the new world

We are not companies with closed boundaries, corporate veils, NDAs, and non-competes — we are permeable, overlapping network entities sensing and responding in real time from a thousand empowered autonomous beings

Top-down management leveraging command-and-control hierarchies are for the mahogany boardrooms of yesteryear

And we are navigators, adventurers, and explorers of the future

We are married to the sea

WE ARE BUILDING A SHIP

It will carry anyone who wants to board

Any age, any gender, any worldview

You are all welcome

You are all necessary

Find an oar and start pulling

Yarn is a ship from the fleet of tomorrow

WE HAVE BUILT IT FROM THE LUMBER OF THE DARK FOREST

NOW THAT WE'RE HERE, YOU CAN SEE THAT THE DESTINATION DOESN'T MATTER AT ALL

We can sail the seas of yield aggregation, or we can go find new dragons

We will write protocols beyond the edge of the map

All that matters is that we sail
